Allama Iqbal

Allama Iqbal is our national poet. He is our national hero. He was born on 9th November, 1877 at Sialkot. His father's name was Sheikh Noor Muhammad. He was a noble and kind man.

Allama Iqbal got his early education from Sialkot. He got the degree of M.A from Government College Lahore. Then he went to England for higher studies. He worked as a professor and lawyer.

Allama Iqbal is my favorite personality. He worked for the Muslims of the subcontinent. He awoke the Muslims from their sleep. He worked for the Muslims day and night. He had a great love for Islam. He expressed his feelings in his poems. He wrote many poems for children and youth. His poetry is full of messages. He gave the idea of Pakistan. He was a true Muslim and kind man. Bang-e-Dara, Bal-e- Jib reel, Zarb-e-Kaleem are his famous Urdu poetry books. He died on 21st April, 1938. His tomb is near Badshahi Mosque Lahore.

Iqbal is regarded as Shair-e-Mashriq. He is one of those people in the history of Pakistan whose name will always be written in golden words.

Story writing

The farmer and the Snake

Once upon a time there was a poor farmer living in a small village. He was very kind to animals. One day the farmer was returning home from the town. He saw a black snake almost frozen on account of cold. He took pity on it and carried it home in his basket. There he placed it near the fire and his children gathered around it. After few minutes the snake began to move about. All of a sudden it rushed at one of them. But the farmer killed it before it would bite him.

Moral: Nature cannot be changed.

Story writing

Building castles in the air

Once upon a time a farmer sent his daughter to the market for selling milk. She put the pot on her head and said to herself, “this milk will be sold out in no time and it would fetch a lot of money for my father. After few months my father would become very rich. He would then receive many offers for my marriage. Tossing my head I would refuse them all”. But the moment she did so the pot fell down and broke into pieces and the milk was all spilt on the ground. Tears welled up into her eyes and she returned home full of grief.

Moral:

Man proposes, God disposes.
